- Question and answer session.

Details of the event:

The department of Mechanical Engineering had organized guest lecture on “Study abroad after engineering” for the benefit of pre-final year students and Third year students of D Y Patil School of Engineering. Mr. Shreyas Ramakrishnan, Regional Head - West, Jamboree Education Pvt. Ltd was the resource persons for this training program.

During the formal inaugural session, Prof. Pooja R. Nawathe, Coordinator of Training and Placement welcomed the gathering and also introduced resource persons to the students.

In first session he discussed Engineering is growing as a field of study in colleges around the world as people continue to realize how important, interesting and lucrative this field is. Engineering uses many different areas of knowledge in the construction of machines and devices. Students in engineering are well prepared to put their skills to use in a variety of interesting careers, from building cars, spaceships, and computers to designing environmentally friendly electrical systems.

Few engineering majors in the U.S. decide to study abroad, which makes sense -- an engineering course load is enough work as it is! However, there are quite a few top-rated engineering programs internationally that would be the perfect place to continue your technical studies, while also having the opportunity to study another language and explore a new country.

In second session he discussed about different exams like GMAT and GRE.

What is the GMAT?

Accepted by more than 7,000 management programs in India, US and other countries, GMAT® is a computer adaptive test that assesses analytical writing, quantitative and verbal skills of students applying for MBA and similar courses to a graduate school of business. The GMAT® Exam has been the test of choice for world's leading business schools for one reason – it works. Quite simply, no other exam lets you showcase the skills that matter most in the business school classroom and in your career.

The examination is entirely computer-based and scored on a maximum of 800. Though the GMAT score alone cannot guarantee admission into a B-school, it is one of the major factors taken into consideration.

The GMAT® has four sections – Verbal, Quantitative, Integrated Reasoning and Analytical Writing Assessment. The following is the GMAT® test structure.

What is the GRE?

A standardized test, the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) measures verbal, mathematical and analytical writing skills of students aspiring to undergo their graduate studies abroad. The test intends to aid graduate schools (of all fields other than business) in assessing an applicant's potential for advanced study. Most universities in the US, while inviting applications for MS programs, ask for GRE® scores.

The examination is entirely a computer-based test, and no two students get an identical set of questions. The test is scored on a maximum of 340. The GRE® score alone cannot guarantee admission into a university or college - the test is only one of the major factors taken into consideration in the long process of an applicant getting admitted into the program that they desire.

The GRE® test has three parts - Quantitative, Verbal and Analytical Writing Assessment. The following is the GRE® test structure:

At the end of the day program concluded with Questions and feedback from students and vote of thanks by Coordinator.

In recent years, a lot of researchers in various fields have conducted a lot of research on the problem of tender offer in the construction industry from various perspectives. They have established a variety of offer models. As for the existing offer models in China, they are mainly used in two research directions.

One is to develop software strictly based on fixed budget or rules for calculation of engineering quantity, and to build the corresponding database by referring to price index or other data, in order to achieve quick offer by using computers^[2].

The other is to build forecasting model through analysis of huge amount of data, to avoid cumbersome calculations for tender offer. Using this method, you can achieve quick offer manually or by developing corresponding computer software.

To sum up, with the intensive competition in domestic and international construction markets and the maximization of opened construction market, it is more and more difficult for enterprises to bid for engineering projects successfully. Facing the intense competition, how enterprises increase the probability of winning a bid and how to determine the relationship between affecting factors and final offer, have become the difficult problems of bidding. This paper uses artificial neural network theory and methods to resolve such problems.

3. Construction of artificial neural network to decision-making model for tender offer

Neural network has its unique advantages. With parallel distribution, self-organizing, adaptive, self-learning and fault tolerance excellent performance, it can adapt to multiple factors, uncertainty and nonlinear problems pretty well. It consists of input layer, hidden layer and output layer^[3]. The numbers of neurons of different layers are different. It consists of forward transmission and reverse transmission. Input n -factors information of predicted values and assessed values of affecting sample factors to the input layer, which will be processed by the hidden layer and the output y is the predicted values and assessed values of sample factors performance index^[4]. The setting up of n -factor index considers generality and dynamicity. The model strives to reflect the main factors affecting samples and the main factors leading to differences in samples comprehensively and objectively. Although it is a black box type of prediction and assessment, it has proven its strong ability to learn and it can generate relative precise predicted value and the assessed value of a variety of factors needing to be considered through integration of the data and a non-linear transformation. As for tender offer for construction projects, as tender offer involves a number of factors, this paper applies neural network method to tender offer, which not only improves the accuracy of the tender offer, but also makes it more convenient and easy to use.

In the practical application of artificial neural networks, forward feedback network, i.e. BP network, is particularly prominent, as the core part of the forward networks, it reflects the essence of artificial neural networks. This paper uses BP network algorithm to analyze the problem of tender offer under the condition of multiple factors^[5].

3.1 Identification of factors affecting tender offer and Analysis

Tender offer is a complex and meticulous decision-making process. The specific composition of it is changed when the contents of project of bidding and invitation for bidding document and evaluation methods are changed. The formula of tender offer shall be:

$$\text{Bid Price} = \text{estimated cost} \times (1 + \text{increase percentage of price})^{[6]}$$

Factors affecting bidding are often uncertain and ambiguous and even related to psychological factors of the decision-makers of the tender. However, an experienced bidder can roughly estimate the project's price, according to the type of characteristics of the project as well as some specific situations, by referring to his past successful experiences, without tedious calculations^[7]. In this paper, factors are divided into three categories according to the characteristics of bidding for the project: environmental

Name of the Event: Seminar on "Entrepreneurship: From Engineer's point of view by Alumni".

Date: 29/08/2022

Time: 3:30 PM to 5.00 PM

Venue: Lab Nos 331

Students: Students from SE, TE, BE Computer Engineering Department

Report:

Computer Engineering Department organized a Seminar on "Entrepreneurship: From Engineer's point of view by Alumni" from 3:30 PM to 5.00 PM for SE, TE, BE Students of Computer Engineering. The lecture was headed by Mr. Anshuman Vats who is working in Leanafy | Indianapolis, US.

When studying in colleges, students are not aware about workplace expectations. Hence awareness is to be created by exposing them with real-time workplace. Internships work very well to bridge the gap between academia and industry, some of the universities in India (ex: VTU) has already made it mandatory as a part of engineering curriculum. By working on internship, engineering graduates not only learn in terms of their job expectations but also learn about other behavioral aspects. These behavioral aspects include written and oral communication with colleagues and seniors, taking complete ownership of the given work, delivering quality output and learning on real-time tasks. Also by attending company level common activities like team meeting, offsite-workshops and company all-hands meeting interns can build big picture of how an organization functions.

Along with internship students can be made aware about the corporate world by having different engagement programs with the industry. Some of them include having guest lectures by experts, 1:1 mentoring, having experts as project guide, having industry experts as extended faculty etc. The activity of setting up a business or businesses, taking on financial risks in the hope of profit.

- You are responsible for everything!
- You will almost always be on a financial risk!
- You would probably forget what vacations are!
- You won't be working 9-5; You will be working 24/7!

- You will be your own Boss, Manager, Developer, Intern!

Working on that one idea that genuinely interests you and you can figure out a way to make money out of it. Why would you not give it a shot?

The session was followed by student questions where they inquired more about how to bridge gap between academics and industry and its scope.
